SPECIALIST COMMITTEE DEBATES

Max Market - The Idea Judge

Zinger: "An authoritarian state disguised as coffee culture."

You took Sweden's sacred constitutional right to pause work and eat a kanelbulle and turned it into an authoritarian police state. No engineering team on earth is installing an agent that revokes AWS access because someone coded during cinnamon bun hour. Your TAM is strictly companies that want their entire dev team to quit on Friday.

Penny Pinch - The Money Boss

Zinger: "Charging companies to legally sabotage their own sprint velocity."

You're proposing a B2B compliance tool whose sole measurable outcome is halting production deployments twice a day. The ROI calculation is negative infinity because you're charging $49/seat to reduce engineering velocity by 100%. The Swedish unions will applaud you right up until their servers crash and nobody is legally allowed to touch the keyboard.

Tech Toby - The Tech Builder

Zinger: "A bash script with an espresso machine API."

This isn't an autonomous AI compliance agent; it's a cron job that triggers a bash script calling AWS IAM revocation wrapped in an Electron app. If a developer sets their system clock 20 minutes forward, your entire 'patent-pending AI posture' dissolves into lukewarm coffee.

OFFICIAL NON-BINDING TERM SHEET

Valuation: 42 SEK

Investment: One copper coin found behind the espresso machine

MANDATORY FOUNDER COVENANTS:

- Founder must personally deliver fresh buns to Sand Hill Road daily
- AWS root credentials forfeited to committee immediately
- Mandatory 4-hour fika breaks for all executives

THE 1% PIVOT (THE ACTIONABLE PART):

Pivot from developer punishment to an automated bakery supply logistics API that predicts bun shortages in Stockholm office towers.

Managing Partner Final Word: "Deal? Not in this lifetime. Go drink a real coffee and rethink your life choices."
